Average Proportion of English Language Learners (ELLs) in Highest and Lowest Ranking High Schools, in Massachusetts, and Statewide, in 2021

The highest ranked high schools in Massachusetts tend to have the lowest proportion of ELL students. Ranking is based on scores on college readiness, curriculum, state assessment proficiency, state assessment performance, and graduation rates. ELL students are overrepresented in high schools with the lowest rankings in the state, and underrepresented in high schools with the highest rankings in the state.

Source: Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education | Visual by Raquel Rosenbloom